Ha'Azinu - האזינו

October 12, 2019—13 Tishrei 5780

Ha'Azinu is a poem of 70 lines. Each verse consists of at least two lines that are parallel to each other in meaning.

In last week's parasha, Moses was commanded to write a song, containing Israel's experiences with G-d and the Torah, and warnings of what will happen if they abandon G-d's commandments. In this song, delivered on the last day of his life, Moses calls upon heaven and earth to be witnesses. Moses urges the people to consider their history and realize how special they are for all the things that G-d has done for them. He emphasizes that they will only find life and endure in the Land of Israel if they follow the Torah.

G-d then tells Moses to go up to Mount Nebo and, from there, view the entire land. But he will not be able to enter the land and will die on Mount Nebo.

This Day in Jewish History— 13 Tishrei

In 2000, at the start of the Palestinian intifada, two Israeli reserve soldiers were brutally lynched at a Palestinian police station in Ramallah. The two had taken a wrong turn and ended up in the West Bank town where they were set upon by a crowd. Palestinian police officers stood by -- and some participated -- as the crowd beat, mutilated, burned and disemboweled the Israelis. The image of one young man, waving to the crowd with bloodied hands, came to symbolize the vicious wave of terror that would claim over 1,000 Israeli lives.
